Re Item V

Reasoned statement with regard to novelty, inventive step or industrial applicability; citations and explanations supporting such statement

V.1 The document EP0 528 122 A is regarded as being the closest prior art to the subject-matter of claim 1, and discloses (the references in parentheses applying to this document): a sharpening unit for a blade, comprising a grinding wheel unit (31, etc.) with at least two grinding wheels (23, 24) opposed to act on two sides defining a bevel of said blade (21, 21'), wherein said grinding wheel unit (31, etc.) is movable according to at least a first degree of freedom to center the grinding wheels (21, 21') in respect of a lying surface of a portion of the cutting bevel of the blade (21, 21') on which said grinding wheels (23, 24) act. The subject-matter of claim 1 therefore differs from this known sharpening unit in that the grinding wheel unit is freely movable (to center the grinding wheel unit).

The subject-matter of claim 1 is therefore new (Article 33(2) PCT).

The caracterizing features of claim 1 allow a balanced and uniform sharpening action on the two sides of the blade. Moreover, when the grinding wheel unit is equipped with a movement towards the blade axis to recover any decreases in the diameter of the blade caused by wear, with self-centering of the grinding wheels the pressure exerted can be controlled more accurately, avoiding imbalanced pressures and thus excessive wear. None of the prior art suggests to have a freely moving grinding unit, i.e. a grinding unit which is capable of free movement to centre the grinding wheels with respect to the blade. The solution to this problem proposed in claim 1 of the present application is therefore considered as involving an inventive step (Article 33(3) PCT).

V.2 Claims 2-27 are dependent on claim 1 and as such also meet the requirements of the PCT with respect to novelty and inventive step.
